PLENARY SESSION I : KEYNOTE ADDRESS

Neighborhood Collective Efficacy: Its Intellectual History, Empirical Support, and Potential for Enhancing Cross-National Research

Abstract

Neighborhood collective efficacy reflects the capacity of local residents to act together to achieve common goals. It flourishes when residents know each other, share common values, and trust each other. It is domain-specific rather than general; Neighbors who effectively monitor and supervise local youth may or may not foster the cognitive skills of those youth. Local resource deprivation, residential instability, and past crime undermine the collective capacity of neighbors to maintain public safety. However, controlling for these, collective efficacy predicts reduced crime and social disorder. I'll briefly consider key methodological advances. But key questions remain unanswered: When does local solidarity generate hostility to outsiders? Do locally efficacious neighborhoods welcome new immigrants? Is local collective efficacy a substitute or a complement to effective formal control? For example, in China, where the formal organization of urban neighborhoods is far more developed than in the United States, does collective efficacy remain analytically useful? What, then, is the role of collective efficacy in cross-national research on urban life and public policy? We'll find time to discuss these and other open questions.

Speaker: Stephen Raudenbush

Lewis-Sebring Distinguished Service Professor,
Department of Sociology, University of Chicago

Bio

Stephen Raudenbush is the Lewis-Sebring Distinguished Service Professor in the Department of Sociology, the College, faculty in the Harris School of Public Policy Studies and Chairman of the Committee on Education at the University of Chicago.

He is interested in statistical models for child and youth development within social settings such as classrooms, schools, and neighborhoods. He is best known for his work developing hierarchical linear models, with broad applications in the design and analysis of longitudinal and multilevel research. he is currently studying the development of literacy and math skills in early childhood with implications for instruction; and methods for assessing school and classroom quality. He is a member of the National Academy of Sciences, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences the recipient of the American Educational Research Association award for Distinguished Contributions to Educational Research.

PLENARY SESSION II:
International Migration and Urban Transformation: The Case of Los Angeles, USA

Abstract

The linkage between international migration and urbanization has not been sufficiently explored in the research literature. Migration studies has often focused on why people move, where they are resettled, and how well they fare in their new destinations to the neglect of the profound impacts of global movements of people on local places of migrant reception, while urban studies has seldom focused on how cities are transformed by migrations in and out of them. The two bodies of work run parallel courses and have not yet been integrated coherently. The paper aims to fill this gap. It takes a historical look at the urban development of Los Angeles, the third largest metropolis in the United States and the second largest gateway city receiving international migrants. It addresses the following specific questions: How has Los Angeles become a major immigrant gateway metropolis in the U.S. since the 1970s? What role has international migration played in the social, economic, and physical make-up of the city? What are consequences of urban/suburban development on natives and immigrants and their communities? The main goal is to shed light on the relationship between migration and urbanization to understand how international migration has changed the nature, shape, and social fabric of cities and how urban development has, in turn, affected subsequent migration flows and facilitated, or hindered, immigrant resettlement and integration.

Speaker: ZHOU, Min

Distinguished Professor of Sociology & Asian American Studies, Walter and Shirley Wang Endowed Chair in US-China Relations & Communications, and Director of Asia Pacific Center at the University of California, Los Angeles

Bio

Min Zhou was the Inaugural Chair of the Department of Asian American Studies (2001-05) at UCLA. The International Chinese Sociological Association (ICSA) was renamed in 2018 from the North American Chinese Sociologists Association (NACSA), a nonprofit association that aims to promote social scientific research on Chinese societies, cultures, and populations in the world. The association functions to foster scholarly exchanges and to facilitate a continuing dialogue among sociologists of Chinese and non-Chinese descent in North America, Pacific Asia, and elsewhere in the global community. To achieve this goal, the NACSA organizes conferences, publishes newsletters, and carries out cooperative activities, including professional exchanges, joint research, information networks, and scholarly visits.

History

The North American Chinese Sociologists Association (NACSA) began without a name in the 1970s as an informal pay-as-you-go dinner gathering of Chinese-speaking sociologists in North America during the annual meetings of the American Sociological Association (ASA). Those sociologists included, among others, Haitung King, Ronald Chen, William T. Liu, Lucie Cheng, Che-Fu Lee, Nan Lin, Wen-Hui Tsai, Yung-Mei Tsai, and Esther Chow. While some of these senior sociologists have since retired, all but one of them were or have been active members of NACSA. By 1981, Nan Lin who was then at the State University of New York at Albany decided to form a loose network of Chinese-speaking sociologists and gave it a name—the North American Chinese Sociologists Association. He began collecting membership dues of $10/year to cover some of the expenses in publishing a newsletter and a directory. By the late 1980s, he had succeeded in transforming the group's annual gathering into a more systematic sharing of information following the dinner during the ASA meetings. Participants from North America got acquainted with one another during the dinner; guests from abroad were introduced to North American Chinese sociologists; and news of sociological research activities developing in China and Taiwan were reported. The medium of verbal communication was Chinese (Mandarin), while the newsletter was published in English.

In 1990 when Nan Lin moved to Duke University, he turned over the task of maintaining this informal network of Chinese-speaking sociologists to Yung-Mei Tsai of Texas Tech University, who agreed to serve for only two years, from September of 1990 to August of 1992. Against the background of history of budget deficits, Yung-Mei Tsai decided to institute a Life Membership Program, as the contributions from the members were irregular and voluntary, which averaged mostly $10 per person. A total of 9 Life Members, each donating $150, were accepted by April 30, 1992. Despite efforts to raise funds, this informal network of sociologists had no budget. The network was not legally an association yet, because it did not have the bylaws, a Board of Directors, and elect officers.

A teaching and research opportunity in Taiwan forced Yung-Mei Tsai to turn over the responsibilities of coordinating NACSA's activities to Elena Yu four months earlier than originally planned. She agreed to serve as Coordinator of NACSA from May 1, 1992 until August 31, 1994, although no successor was immediately found who would follow her term. Elena Yu's first action was to file for a Tax Identification Number (T.I.N) with the Internal Revenue Service, followed by an application for a non-profit and tax-exemption status. Next, an annual membership fee was established at $20 effective immediately in 1992, and beginning January 1, 1993, a Life Membership fee of $300 per person was collected. The membership size jumped from 43 to more than 70 within less than 12 months. Among the more than 100 members today, 30 are Life Members. During Elena's term, she succeeded in obtaining a grant from Ford Foundation for an NACSA-sponsored conference on gender during the ASA meetings in Miami, Florida in 1993. Due to Elena's wise investment decision, NACSA's assets would also grow substantially.

In 1995, Dudley Poston succeeded Elena Yu as President of NACSA. During his term, with Alvin So as Secretary-Treasurer, the semi-annual newsletter of the association was on track with extensive information on members' research activities, conference announcements and programs, and sociological developments in China, Hong Kong, and Taiwan. NACSA sponsored another conference right before the ASA annual meetings in Toronto in 1997. In 1997, Alvin So was appointed President by the Board to succeed Dudley Poston, and Xiangming Chen became the Secretary and edited the newsletters. In 1998, Alvin So's career move to Hong Kong led the Board of Directors appointing Xiangming Chen as the next President for a two-year term. Xueguang Zhou became the Secretary and edited the newsletters. In 1999, NACSA sponsored another conference right before the ASA meetings in Chicago (see below). A new President will be appointed at the next Board meeting in 2000. Ping Chun Hsiung will edit the newsletters for the year 2000.

Counting its informal gestation phase, NACSA's history has spanned over the last two decades of the 20th century. This period has witnessed a most rapid growth in the sociological research on Chinese societies and populations on both sides of the Pacific Rim, especially the People's Republic of China. This research is characterized by innovative theoretical development, extensive use of both survey and case study methods, and close collaboration between North American sociologists and their Chinese counterparts in China, Hong Kong, and Taiwan. The published research results have made their way repeatedly into the top journals of mainstream sociology in North America. NACSA's history has also coincided with rapidly growing numbers of students from China, Taiwan, and Hong Kong obtaining sociology Ph.D. degrees in North American universities. A significant group of them (estimated in the 30s) has become faculty members at North American universities and colleges, with some establishing themselves at the top-tier sociology departments. Many others have returned to China, Hong Kong, and Taiwan to become key players in a new generation of researchers and teachers at universities and institutes. Poised to take advantage of this dynamic research environment and talent pool, NACSA's prospect in the 21st century looks bright indeed.
